Twelve stones, [And of course We know crystals have power. (Tag your it witch.)] twelve Apostles, twelve gates, [Forget that one is a little fishy.] and twelve tribes. Of course the twelve tribes must have been represented in their entirety on that Ephod of the high priest. Wasn't that neat the way that garb ended up in that Indy movie?

Saint Paul breaths fire, heat, energy, life, into the twelve gods trapped in purgatory. None of these is a shitty little god. We at Team God call the shitty little gods, the enemy fifty. Those people that are desperate to worship flesh still will. The Saints will have worship. The competition with shitty little gods has met its inevitable end.

How about that thar' number seven? Seven days a week sure don't work for all the shitty little gods' followers. How about five days a week? seventy three weeks in a year and every four years a special festival to Jehovah extra day. We will leap in that one. A day to Jehovah certainly is a pagan ceremony to feed the four beasts. "What days wouldst thou be ending asks God?" Why we shitty gods end the days; light and darkness were separated, and the sabbath. That gives us our five day week with one day the plebs have to themselves. That would be the day animals roamed the earth.

Ten days on and two days off. No wonder burn-out is inevitable. Six days of toil with one day working out the life of God Almighty is life to the soul. The military can roll on that baby.

The spirits of God Almighty are seven. Seven standards of Righteousness are held constant. Those of the earth John compared to the seven Spirits. Seven days all started at even and ended with light going down. We sit mid even and are reaching for the sunlight. The Lamp of God will never go out. On earth we will still have evening and morning into day reminding us of the Greatness of God Almighty who made no place for death.

What did mac do? Restored the Holiness to the looted Ephod.
