

Tail Does Not Wag the God

January 4, 2020

What was wrong with deliverer, prophet, ark and tabernacle builder, and judge, Moses, saying, "Should I get water from this rock?" Not one damned thing. The trouble?...

You Don't Wag the God

The trouble? Pandering to that angry crowd and letting them dictate the miracle the true God was going to perform.

The Chariot

Four things are simultaneously accomplished when the true God moves. His timing is dead on perfect. The four simultaneous accomplishments: love is felt, justice is accomplished, wisdom is accounted, and His power is demonstrated: all through His servants.

The Miracle is the True God's Choice

To stay out of trouble Moses needed to tell that crowd, "The true God does not dance for your fits." We know this because Jesus made it clear that the generation he was speaking to was a fitful wad that had the self-discipline of children in a market place screaming, "We played music and you didn't dance, we don't like you."

"I perform the true God's miracles as He deems they are beneficial" -- a good follow up to help Moses situation after refusing the crowds. It is because Moses did not let God have that moment of deliverance the way He wanted to give it that Moses was in trouble. It is a serious thing to take from the true God His moments. Moses basically stood in the way of a form of deliverance.

Credit is Up for Grabs

Understand, the true God gives latitude to people that He has given authority to. A king will declare what is righteous and wrong in his name. Is that wrong? No. The law might be imperfect, and that law will get fixed if it stands in the way of the true God's will.

We have many laws in this world. Some laws feed terrorism, drug cartels, and human trafficking. What is abused will be amended. Does that happen overnight? No. The true God is patient. Make progress and He withholds His anger. Make no mistake, He is angry at wrongdoing. This is the precious time for repentance and eradicating ignorance.

When the Chariot Moves

Governments pandering to illicit lobby interests will get replaced. How does that happen? Are not most of you elected? What if every sheep of the true God all voted at once? What in hell do you think would happen to corrupt law makers? Good luck getting even McDonald's to hire you. They find hard working people same as Walmart. Those that listen to the true God's voice will be sitting in government. Bye, bye, Satan.

Were you replaced in Government? Make petitions to the true God. Read your Bible and build that precious relationship. Voting is by choice. The true God loves the neutral too. Understand when you step in that ballot-box He will count on you to pray. His chariot will be on the move.
