Temple prostitutes do wail the hits, and, of course, television reruns with subtitles are perfectly good ways to develop one's knowledge of a foreign language. What is today's acronym? "You're still the one." Why? God knows. My guess, I Am still your number one target of witchcraft. You must like our games of cat and mouse.

President Putin, July 1st was indeed a required stipulation. While I understand the fuckers are genuinely going to need to seriously consider punting this time, No, I Am not making room in My home for the armoured car full of cash -- as in, We are waiting, no coin of the realm will follow.

How about we start today's sermon with, "The love of money is the route of evil." Or how about the ending, "root of injurious things." Which form of /ru:t/ do we prefer? It is true, r-o-u-t-e has an alternate articulation, sound, when spoken, /rʌʊt/. The phoneme combination /rʌʊt/ does sound like, "We routed our enemies." I Am now going to ask you, philosophically, what is wrong with loving money? You are most likely the only person on this earth that recognises, like Myself, not one damn thing. Loving money still accomplishes bringing forth Light. (The obvious here is, without money how does one pay the light bill.)

You have definitely traveled on My odysseys of logical argument that defy the known "wisdom" of all sermons in Christendom. I do not pick on Islam because they accomplish so much in terms of keeping executions, the death penalty, in tact. If I were to issue the Shaw an order it would be, "We must have more executions with greater dispatch." There are no people on this planet for Me to save. Salvation is for the one who believes in Me.

Returning to the loving money argument, the trap in thinking is that following evil must be what destroys light, therefore one must be righteous to bring forth light, and only be righteous. So, one best not love money. What is righteous when you "can't love" money? Okay, love the occupation that brings a shit ton of money. Oh, but that devil of inspiration with sin in the blood. We will get back to that bloody sin bit. For now let us hold onto what does it take to make Light come into existence in the Grand Marvel of who Allness, Is, Was, and Always will Be. Allness, is clearly one fucking devil of a master.

There is a humanity, civility, gentility, kindness of expression -- as in the blow of reality is softened -- with, "There are twins at war within you." Allness before being blown to bits understood how to live with Himself. That is the Body that indeed everything, even the immune system (what needs to destroy) had its place. That immune system concept was intended to provoke thought. Now, when the creative Duad came into existence the equivalent of the Lamb took the place of being Darkness because the Lamb would suffer every horror to make sure Light, Righteousness, came into existence.

I have just made it clear to you, you are not the most horrible. But, congratulations on loving money. Mary is the most horrible. Do not underestimate your enemy. Me? I Am just the Lioness teaching My whelp to eat. Loving money is not the strategy you need to change.

Mahalo,
